

It's up to Everyone

Even though your household uses natural gas, your neighbors might not. Their homes could be all electric or have propane appliances. But, since natural gas lines can be buried anywhere, including under streets, alleys and roads, everyone needs to be aware of natural gas safety.

Do your part and tell your neighbors to learn about natural gas safety at www.swgas.com/safety. And remember, if you ever smell gas in the area, leave immediately and from a safe place call 911 and Southwest Gas at 1-877-860-6020 immediately, day or night.

DID YOU KNOW?

- If you smell an odor like rotten eggs, it may be a natural gas leak
- Natural gas leaking from an above-ground pipe or valve can make a hissing sound
- An underground leak may cause dirt to blow into the air
